

Department of Political Science

Sarat Centenary College

Programme Outcomes

- The degree programme in Political Science enables the students to gain an idea of politics, administration, society, culture and international relations.
- It encourages the students to receive an effective outlook on various aspects of daily life as a responsible citizen emphasizing the methods and theories.
- The structural and functional aspects of political institutions along with the critical understanding of society and politics are being generated.
- After completion of the degree programme, the students shall be capable of getting a job in various fields related to analysis of political issues, international relations, media, teaching etc.
- The students may also get an interest for research in the future.

Course Outcome

Major/DS Course (Coe) POLS1011

Paper Name- Western Political Thought

The Western Political Thought papers include some western philosophers from ancient to present. It helps the students to unearth the historical background from where the political thought and ideas originated. The different kinds of government and ideologies are fashioned after the great revolution. These kinds of Western patterns of governments are contributing to the western nations' development in this given context. A comparative study can lead to understanding the impact of Western governments' effect in influencing developing countries in their governance.

Major/DS Course (Coe) POLS2011

Paper Name-Political Theory

The Political Theory paper helps to understand the different theories prevalent in Political Science. This paper aims to provide students a relative understanding about political science. The core area of political theory is construction of theories about political issues having relation with sociology and economics. The notion of Nation, Community Interest, Organic life, culture of Governance and relation between individual and collective life are some of the issues dominated in the early period of political theory. Disintegration of Feudalism, emergence of capitalism and middle class gave birth to a new middle class having a strong role in modernization and governance. As a result, numerous new ideas came to the fore which radicalized political theory. Colonialism, and its Disintegration, Spread of national liberation movement, post first and second world war developments invited new situations having critical thinking. Post colonialism, post modernism and Globalization with different trends are now in the main domain of political science. A good learning may help the students to be acquainted with the far reaching developments in our contemporary world.